Yard Sale Safety

Every weekend in communities across the country signs go up on street corners advertising garage or yard sales. Those who have thrown a sale can tell the uninitiated how difficult it really is to organize, price and sell everything.

What they may not tell or possibly be unaware of are the safety measures the seller should take to prevent robbery, theft or assault. While there is no way to be 100% safe in any situation, the following tips will help sellers stay safe.

- There is safety in numbers. Whenever possible, have someone at the sale to assist you.
- Have one designated cashier so no prospective buyer can claim they paid someone else.
- Set up the cashier's table where they can see anyone leaving the sale
- Have the assistant walk around the sale as a shopper while watching for shoplifters.
- Keep a very limited amount of money on you! Fanny pack or cash box is your choice but only keep enough money in it at any given time to make change for a $20.
- If someone wants you to break a large bill, like $100, for a small item, simply a tell them you will be happy to hold the item if they want to go get change. Don't open your drawer or wallet and check for money in front of them.
- Hold the sale out in the open, not in the garage. A garage can be a dangerous place! They are usually set back, have limited visibility from the road and neighbors, and often have an entry into the house. It's easy for a person to slip into the house, take what ever they like or look to see what is there for future reference, all while you're busy helping a customer. A garage holds tools, equipment and other items that offer a tempting prize for someone casing the house for possible burglary then or in the future. Shut the garage door and lock the doors to the house.
- Dogs are a double-edged sword and should be treated with caution. Dogs are protective and a natural deterrent to an assailant, however they are protective and could easily believe an innocent shopper approaching their owner is a threat. If you are going to keep a dog outside as company or protection during a sale, make - sure he or she is on a leash.

- Cut down on possible theft by having a 12-15 foot buffer zone between the road and the very last table. Don't have things at the end of the driveway where someone could drive up; grab an armful and then speed off.
  - Sales are a great way of teaching monetary values to children BUT the parent needs to be cautious with their child. If they are setting up a lemonade or soda stand to earn money, be sure it is very close to you, NEVER right next to the street. If the children are very young, be sure you are the one making change. Let them watch but don't give some quick-change artist the opportunity to ruin your child's day.
  - Set up tables so you can see every one of them from where you sit. If you hang clothes up for sale, do it on one side of the sale and use them as an outside perimeter. Don't allow them to block your view to your house or other items for sale.
  - Keep a cordless or cell phone with you at all times.
  - Have everything you want to sell outside and ready to be seen. Never walk into your house with a stranger to show them an item.
  - While setting up, run extension cords from the house for fans to help keep you and your customers cool. If you have any electronic items, put them all together on a table near the fan. People want to know if items work. If you go inside to hunt for a cord, they could easily walk away with the item while you are gone or follow you into the house.

Car Break-in on Hollyhock Rd!

One of our neighbors forgot to lock the car doors and had personal items stolen - they saw an late 80's or early 90's red Toyota in the area that could have been the thieves' car. Be on the look-out for this car.

Each year, $1.255 billion in personal items and accessories are stolen from vehicles in about 1.85 million thefts. Almost any worthless personal item that's visible from the outside -- even an empty shopping bag -- could be seen as a valuable or a carrier of valuables.
